c. It is possible to have and & or conditions against positions and units. I.e., French with (and) German, or Spanish.

d. It is anticipated that ten (10) will be the maximum number of individual languages making up the requirement for a given language unit.

e. Normally, the office level is the highest level of organization to which language requirements will be placed. Encouragement is being given to all personnel officers listing requirements to code them at the lowest possible level.

25X1 f. [] will group the various dialects of a language into general groupings and assign unique codes for use in the LDP only. These unique codes will be used to facilitate listing a requirement for a language which encompasses all/some of the dialects to ensure an employee possessing one of the dialects will appear on the LCR.

g. The LCR will initially be produced quarterly and possibly after a year of production, will be cut back to a semi-annual run.

h. The majority of language requirements will not be received until 1 Sept. 1969.

25X1 i. [] indicated that the Placement Division, O/P, will monitor the assignment of employees into language positions ensuring that the necessary waiver is received in cases where the employee does not satisfy the language requirement.

25X1 j. [] indicated that it will probably be necessary to produce an annual report indicating only the employees that have had their language proficiency tested.
